Official Publication of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology
February 1997, Volume 11, Number 2
A journal for the 21st century

This is the right journal for all working life scientists. In 1997 look for:

- State-of-the-art reviews in biochemistry, biophysics, cell biology, developmental biology, experimental therapeutics, immunology, investigative pathology, molecular biology, neurobiology, nutrition, pharmacology, physiology, protein science, and more.
- Serial reviews of—hepatic canaliculc membrane...sulfation and sulfotransferases...cytochromes P450...cell motility.
- Original research articles selected for their cutting-edge impact.
- Editorials and the Life Sciences Forum—discussing important issues of public policy.

In addition, The FASEB Journal tables of contents and article abstracts are available on the World Wide Web at http://www.faseb.org

FJ’s 1994 impact factor of 15.115 is the highest of 57 journals in the Biology category of the ISI Journal Citation Reports, and fifth out of 193 journals in the Biochemistry & Molecular Biology category. FJ ranks second after Cell among journals that publish both reviews and original research communications. Find out why.
